THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. The town of Ruhr today (August 1993) is showing constant development. The "Garden" villa settlement between the town park, main railway station and the river is still growing.
2. The pre-World War II repatriates from Germany have set up the so-called "Garden" settlement south of the school for vine-growing. The settlement is expanding in a southward direction.
3. Vineyards still cover the sloping terrain to the east and west of the town. Italian settlers introduced these vineyards (from which a red Italian-type wine is made) some one hundred years ago.
4. Industrial enterprises in the city include a large locksmith workshop in the eastern outlet of Hammelburgstr. During World War II this shop produced gas masks. A small iron foundry is situated on the southeastern outskirts of the town. There is a large car and truck repair shop on Berlinstr. and the town power plant is on the river.
5. New military barracks were constructed at the site of the former Sisters' convent monastery. The present military recreation center is on a hillside.
